

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A process for joining two discrete wire components without the need of a third component, wherein material from the end of one wire component is removed to form a female end and the end of the other wire is formed into a male end. The male may be secured within the female end by conventional means. The female end may be formed by electrical discharge machining or laser drilling.

5

153910 v01.PA (3@R@01!.DOC) (#153910 v1 - w97 25141-0770 - application)

11/30/99 9:53 AM